The teams from American Fork returned with the body of Mr. Tyng about 9 o'clock tonight. They met miners on snewshees with the body, which was recevered about 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Tyng was evidently killed instantly. There is a hole over the right eye which was probably made by a nail, the nose is broken and the left side crushed. Mr. Tyng's hand still clutched a lead pencil when the body was found. There is reason to believe he heard the noise of the son to believe he heard the noise of the oncoming slide and had opened the door of the office when the snow burled him.

Born in Chicago, Ill., in 1851, Mr.
Thomas became a clerk, in 1869, in the national house of representatives. He was then 18 years of age. He held that position until 1879, when President Rutherford B. Hayes appointed him secretary of the Territory of Utah. This position he held for seven years. Luck injured wife, who appeared to be quite sition he held for seven years. Luck was still with him, however, for President Cleveland in 1886 appointed him as she requested that the case be dismissed, the Republican, or minority, member of the Utah commission.

This latter position he held until 1889, and then President Benjamin Harrison appointed him governor of the territory, which position he held for four years. His term expired in 1893, and he remained in private life until 1898, when President William McKinley, through the influence of Glen Miller, then Republican national committeeman, made him postmaster of Salt Lake City. In 1902 he was reappointed at the instigation of Senator Kearns. Now, through the friendship of Senator Sutherland, he will enjoy another four years in the postoffice.

When he completes his new term Mr. Thomas will have served twelve years as Salt Lake's postmaster. This is a record almost, if not altogether, unprecedented in the history of presidential postoffices. It is rarely that so important a bit of patronage is allowed to remain in the possession of one man for so long a time.
